

In The End

As seen on Compass, ABC TV

“A powerful new documentary ... The film is amazing, very sensitively delivered ... I really don't think I can recommend it enough.”

- Richard Aedy, 'Life Matters', Radio National

Old people used to die at home; now, they are ending up in hospital hardwired to machines, surrounded by strangers.

Intensive Care specialist Dr Charlie Corke is desperate to give his elderly patients every chance to get better but he knows that sometimes the things he is doing are just making the dying more drawn-out, more distressing. Charlie is starting to think that, perhaps, we have forgotten how to die.

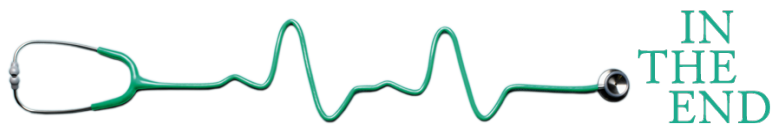

This documentary gently follows the journey of patients, their families and the doctor working on the frontline of a modern-day medical dilemma of our own making.
